How do you want the Efeng Bacha Initiative to assist your entrepreneurship journey?

I would like the Efeng Bacha initiative to assist me in connecting me with other young, passionate entrepreneurs and change-makers so that we may come together to share ideas and work towards building impactful and sustainable businesses that will transform the lives of our people on the African continent. I would also greatly benefit from coaching and mentorship in areas such as personal development, community development and entrepreneurship as I believe this guidance

How do you #ServeLikeMadiba?

I strongly believe in the power and impact of a community that comes together to improve the lives of its people and environment. As such a commitment to service and utilizing different peoples unique gifts and talents towards a common purpose is not only effective but important. I #ServeLikeMadiba by being that catalyst for change in my community, the voice that dares to compel others to come together for the development and advancement of our people. I have had the honour of being able to be the change that I want to see through KMPOWER Tutoring Sessions, which is a program that assists young girls in the community along their academic and personal development journey with the aim of eradicating gender inequality by equipping women and girls with the mindset and tools they need to take up space.

As a #legacyleader, what is your advice to the children and youth of our nation?

My advice to children and youth is, believe in yourself and do not let society define who you should be and what you should do because nothing can ever stop you from making a lasting impact and leaving your #legacy.

What is the legacy you hope to leave one day?

I hope to be remembered for playing a key role in developing the continent into the leading, exemplary pan-African state that it has the potential to be, where the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals are not only met but exceeded. I hope to pave a way for young girls and boys to be empowered and equipped with the tools, knowledge and confidence to build a progressive and sustainable present and future.
